About the host organization ITS Canada

ITS Canada is a professional not-for-profit society recognized as the most knowledgeable source in Canada for information and advice on intelligent transportation systems.

The Society serves more than 750 individuals representing a wide range of public- and private-sector organizations, including representatives from all levels of government throughout Canada. ITS Canada welcomes both corporate memberships and individual decision makers from agencies and organizations committed to 21st century intelligent transportation systems.

A key focus for the Society is the ITS Architecture for Canada, initiated in 1999. Overall, the Architecture defines the functionality of ITS components and the information flows among ITS elements to achieve total system goals. The Society provides a national focus for this work, and fosters multi-disciplinary partnerships to further ITS initiatives.

ITS Canada's profile extends far beyond Canada's borders, and includes prominent positions in the international ITS community.

ITS Canada hosts this annual national forum, which brings together industry leaders to meet, share new ideas, review the latest developments, understand industry direction and consider future projects. This networking and information sharing event is invaluable to any organization involved in the ITS industry.

About the Conference

ITS Canada's 12th Annual Conference, being held at Edmonton's Crowne Plaza Chateau Lacombe Hotel, begins Sunday, May 10, with an opening evening reception.

The three-day event offers a comprehensive program that includes three plenary sessions, one workshop and 14+ breakout sessions. The hands-on breakout sessions feature 40+ topics of interest presented by industry leaders and selected from an international Call for Abstracts.

The event also includes two off-site technical tours. Delegates choosing the first tour will get a first-hand look at the City of Edmonton's Traffic Control Centre and the CN Control Centre to view traffic coordination for these two key organizations. The second tour takes delegates south of the city, to the weigh station near Leduc, Alberta, and to NavCan's traffic control centre at the Edmonton International Airport where visitors can view air traffic coordination in the Edmonton regional area.

A Conference trade show offers sponsors and delegates the opportunity to assess the latest technological advances.

The Conference program consistently attracts delegates representing virtually every facet of the transportation industry. ITS Canada conferences have included representatives from mapping information, transportation engineering, transportation goods movement, traveller information services, traffic management and technology, public policy makers and other transportation managers from all levels of government, international public policy makers, consumer associations and specialized multi-modal technologies.
